Kenji Fisher and Tara Blair have been best friends from the moment that they met. Through the seasons of life, they've grown together and stayed just what they were from the beginning -- just friends. As their work sends them on a project to Japan, they begin to appreciate one another in new ways, all as they question what they've believed, who they've been, and who they can be. Half a world away from everything familiar, they experience everything new together, reminding themselves, again and again, to breathe. Just breathe.
