Bay of Reckoning: The story of the 1898 Battle of Manila Bay Dennis B Posadas

When President William McKinley obtained an 1898 US Congress authorization after the explosion of the USS Maine in Havana harbor to pacify the rebellion in Cuba, he opened up the floodgates for the expansionist cabal of Asst. Navy Secretary Theodore Roosevelt and Admiral George Dewey. Dewey was ordered to attack the Spanish fleet in Manila, Philippines, half a world away from the U.S. In doing so, Dewey had to make a tactical alliance with Emilio Aguinaldo, the leader of the Philippine revolutionary forces against Spain, to obtain information on Spain's military forces in the Philippines. But their alliance was fragile, and erupted into the Philippine-American War. Eventually, Aguinaldo was captured in a daring raid, and both America and the Philippines became allies after the Philippine American War, which led into the Commonwealth era and a fight alongside each other in World War II. This is the story of America's first and forgotten overseas war, long relegated to the pages of history.
