Annaliese tosses her career as a successful model aside for a summer adventure. Taking a job caring for horses at a camp for delinquents looked to be the ideal escape from her shallow life in fashion—and her haunting past—but her adventure becomes more than she bargains for when her new boss sets fire to her passion and is more than willing to warm her behind in the process.

However, she is not ready to settle down yet. She wants to find her own way and make a difference.

Sam is a no-nonsense sort of man. He has to be; he runs a camp for troubled teens. His own haunted past has stolen his ability to trust, leaving behind deep emotional scars. When he first sees the beautiful Annaliese, she triggers his ire—and his libido.

His rational mind tells him not to hire her, but when he sees her application and remembers the beautiful but feisty woman, passion overrides logic and he offers her the job at Camp Horse Feather. Dreams are at risk... futures are at stake... and trust is something that Annaliese and Sam have forgotten how to do.

But the summer just got hotter. Will the flames of passion grow and thrive, or burn hot and bright and fade as the weather cools?
