The Case of the Red-Handed Rhesus (A Rue and Lakeland Mystery) Jessie Bishop Powell

Noel Rue and her husband Lance already lead busy lives, juggling their work at the Midwest Primate Sanctuary with the task of protecting their teen foster daughter, Natasha, from the still-dangerous remnants of a child-porn ring. Are they really ready to adopt six-year-old twins with Asperger's syndrome? When they answer yes, they're plunged into the world of special needs parenting even as chaos blooms at the sanctuary. Besides being low on funds and volunteers, Midwest Primates is nearly at capacity, but owners are surrendering animals in record numbers. Rhesus macaques start escaping, and Noel and Lance know somebody's been monkeying with the enclosures. When a decapitated body disrupts a morning feeding, it's clear time is running out. The police scramble for clues as macaques dangle from the rafters. Will Noel and Lance solve the mystery, or be the next ones to lose their heads . . . literally?
