Daily Chronology of Global Markets and World Economics 2014-12 K E Stone

The Daily Chronology of Global Markets and World Economics 2014-12 (December 2014) is the world's authority on stock market and economic history. The daily chronology is a monthly publication born from the international popularity of the Keystone the Scribe™ daily blog (a partner in the K E Stone Blog Series of Financial Web Sites™). K E Stone provides a daily diary that records the stock, bond and currency market reactions to economic data releases, central banker decisions, political events and any other catalyst that affects global markets in real-time. If you want to learn about the stock market and trading, or are a seasoned pro requiring a useful reference, the daily chronology is the book and blog for you.

The eBook interprets and explains the daily stock market drama in an easy to read format. Readers appreciate the occasional interjection of humor, satire and other witty commentary. Study how markets react during the Monthly Jobs Report and for other important events such as FOMC meetings. Earnings reactions for key individual stocks are highlighted. World political events are described in the context of their effects on global commodity and equity markets. Economic data is explained so even the greenhorn trader or student economist can easily make sense of the complex markets quickly. In addition, handy acronym and ticker symbol lists increase the reading enjoyment.

The daily chronology greatly benefits both novice and professional traders, journalists, students and teachers. Wall Street jargon and business buzzwords are demystified. Chartists and technical analysts correlate the chronology to key market tops, bottoms and inflection points to better understand stock market directional moves. Fundamental analysts rely on the chronology as they develop macro-economic strategies. Journalists and historians praise the daily chronology as the first-stop for market research.

The Daily Chronology of Global Markets and World Economics is a monthly publication. Extra days before and after the target month are provided to create context and better provide the market zeitgeist. The book number displayed on the cover identifies the year and month. For example, '2014-12' is the daily chronology for December 2014 and '2015-01' for January 2015. Keystone the Scribe™ is the trusted source and leading authority in chronicling the daily history of global markets and economics.

If you are a trader, economist, money manager, investment professional, teacher, student or journalist, the Daily Chronology of Global Markets and World Economics is a resource you cannot live without. The daily chronology provides a substantial market edge at an extremely low price. The daily chronology is a nuts and bolts guide to markets. If you want to learn why markets move and understand the daily stock market dance, this is the monthly publication for you. This inexpensive monthly publication and the blog donations via the K E Stone Blog Series of Financial Web Sites™ allow this vital market information to continue especially benefiting novice and professional traders as well as economic and market historians.
